Law Review Author Lunch: “Anti-Libel Injunctions” by Eugene Volokh

Time: 12:00pm

Location: Gittis 214, Haaga Classroom

The Law Review has invited Professor Eugene Volokh from UCLA Law School to discuss his article “Anti-Libel Injunctions” that we published in Issue 1 of Vol. 168. In his article, Professor Volokh explores how the rights afforded by the First Amendment should constrain an injunction against libel, as such an injunction can pose the threat of criminal prosecution for contempt. Professor Volokh argues that many current anti-libel injunctions are not properly crafted to afford those that may become subject to such injunctions proper constitutional protections, such as a trial by jury. Professor Volokh offers a proposal for how such injunctions to be framed to ensure they are constitutionally permissible.

The discussion will be moderated by Professor Tobias Wolff. All are welcome to attend and a lunch from Greek Lady will be served.
